The mission of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology is to improve the quality of life for all women in Wisconsin and beyond. Our Healthy Women Community Talks are a community education series dedicated to helping all women stay healthy throughout their lives.

A woman’s health care needs change over her lifetime; our team of world-class physicians and clinicians is committed to providing women with the most compassionate state-of-the-art health care available. We believe you deserve the latest evidence-based information so you can make the health care choices that are best for you.

Your privacy is our top priority. If you do not wish to receive communications from us, please send an email with your name and address to uwhealthoptout@uwhealth.org or call us at (844) 300-2002. If you are a patient at UW Health, you will continue to receive information related to your care. Thank you.
People have been using birth control for thousands of years, but only since the 1970s has it become really accessible, safe and effective. More recently, new innovations have taken the health and science of birth control a step further. Do you know how many birth control methods there are and which ones are safest and most effective?

If you have an interest in women’s health, please join us for a discussion on the latest innovations in birth control. Learn about an initiative launched by the UW Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology to increase access to birth control. And, discover how birth control can do more than just prevent pregnancy.

TOPICS:
- Effectiveness of all forms of birth control
- Health benefits for using birth control beyond pregnancy prevention
- What the future might hold
- Time for questions and answers

These talks are sponsored by the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology’s “Healthy Women, Healthy Babies” fund.
